

In 2008 Errea was awarded Oeko-Tex 100 certification and was proud to become the first sportswear brand to achieve this international standard. Sublimation is a key part of the sportswear manufacturing process and is especially used during the production of bespoke items. As part of this process, Errea only uses water based dyes; no oil-based dyes are used. All polyester waste is recycled, the majority of which is used to manufacture micro-fibre cleaning cloths in Italy. Errea also recycles all cardboard waste and is sourcing more recycled packaging
